Abstraction is a method where the improvement value is removed from the sales price of improved properties to determine a land value.

Allocation is when a ratio is developed between land value and total value in an area with sufficient vacant land sales and lots with improvements. The ratio is then applied to improved lots in comparable areas where there are no vacant land sales.